

Writing a report as a consequence of your Community Audit

Having asked questions and listened to answers from key people in your community and those who live around you, you will have gathered a huge amount of data. To begin to make sense of the material you will need to begin to fashion a simplified, initial report. If you are going on to draft a business plan, this will help you gather your thoughts and ideas.

To assist in reaching its local community, one church tabulated its findings this way:

- Resident population
- Number
- Gender
- Age
- Marital status
- Ethnicity
- Religion
- Health and provision of care
- Disability
- Economic activity
- Students
- Housing and households
- Family makeup
- Needs
